INTERNATIONAL GEOGRAPHICAL UNION
THE ISRAELI NATIONAL COMMITTEE FOR GEOGRAPHY

Dear Colleagues

We take great pleasure in inviting you to the IGU Regional Conference 2010, hosted by the Israeli National Committee for Geography. The conference will take place in Tel Aviv, July 12 – 16, 2010.

The central theme of the conference is Bridging Diversity in a Globalizing World. Several keynote speakers will be invited for the plenary sessions. Geographers are invited to present their research on any topic in Physical and Human Geography. Commissions are encouraged to integrate their meetings within the conference.

Our region provides visitors with an opportunity to explore the dynamism of a growing Mediterranean economy trying to accommodate both lifestyle-driven development and ecological challenges including arid regions.

Numerous exciting field trips have been arranged before and after the conference to enable you to explore the unique diversity that is Israel.

Register now for the conference, to take advantage of the discounted “early bird” rates. We suggest that you also reserve the field trips and tours that you are interested in to ensure a place on these trips.

We look forward to welcoming you to Tel Aviv, the “city that never sleeps”!

Best wishes
The Steering Committee

CONFERENCE THEME

Bridging Diversity in a Globalizing World

Despite the conformity of an increasingly globalizing world, diversity continues to flourish. While physical, economic and social global processes continue to challenge our planet, they are inevitably met by a multiformity of responses at the national, regional and local scales. This paradox forms the primary theme of the conference.

The international geographic community is uniquely poised to investigate these diverse responses. The integrative nature of the geographical sciences means that in the physical, economic, cultural and social spheres, geographers have a key contribution to make towards bridging diversity. For example, the global challenges of desertification, climatic change and air quality have elicited a plethora of reactions in different national and regional contexts. In the economic realm, supra-national economic integration has ironically given rise to neo-regionalism in some places and a reaffirmation of the nation-state in others. In the social and cultural dimensions, the response to rising global personal mobility has been the unwitting re-creation of social segregation in some urban areas and the heterogenization of others. The political expression of diversity is reflected in the upscaling and downscaling of geographical phenomena such as boundaries and relationships. These are in constant flux in an era of highly complex networks. Geographers can play a key role in analyzing, explaining and bridging this diversity in response to the challenges of a globalizing world.

Israel provides a highly suitable backdrop for this task. Physically situated at the focal intersection between the European, Asian and African continents and demographically, culturally, and politically rooted in each of them, no location better reflects the theme of 'bridging diversity'. Since establishment, some 60 years ago, Israel has always envisaged a bridging role in the Middle East. As an immigrant Jewish society, with some 20% Arab-Palestinian population, the country has grappled with the social, cultural, ethnic and political challenges and opportunities of human diversity. The semi-arid climatic regime of the country has demanded imaginative ecological and environmental responses for sustaining the physical diversity of the national landscape. This has been reflected in areas such as water management, natural habitat protection and countering desertification. In the absence of natural resources and in order to sustain a rate of economic growth commensurate with that of other newly developed countries, the country has had to develop diverse human capital-based points of entry into the global economy.

Hosting the IGU regional conference in the city of Tel Aviv further highlights the conference theme. Tel Aviv reflects a level of social and cultural diversity unparalleled even in a society as heterogeneous as Israel. As the bustling economic core of the country, Tel Aviv, with its 2.5 million metropolitan inhabitants, provides the ideal venue for an inspired engagement with the challenges of bridging diversity.

CONFERENCE PROGRAM

The IGU Commissions and the Conference Steering Committee are presently preparing the conference program. Updates regarding the program will be posted on the conference website: www.igu2010.com

The conference will open with a guest speaker and plenary lecture on the evening of Monday, July 12, 2010.

The following four days will be dedicated to specialist sessions arranged by the IGU Commissions as well as general conference sessions which will cater for a wider audience, addressing topics not necessarily related to the Commissions. A general plenary session is also planned for each day of the conference.

Field trips are being arranged to coincide with the conference. A number of Commissions are planning field trips and general field trips for all participants will also be arranged.

In addition, a daily full day field trip to Jerusalem as well as a half-day field trip of Tel Aviv has been arranged.

Please see the section on Field Trips for more details.

TEL AVIV - JAFFA

Tel Aviv, the "White City", was declared a UNESCO - World Cultural Heritage site in 2003, for the abundance of International Style or Bauhaus architecture. This busy metropolis inspires its visitors with a unique energetic atmosphere of excitement and fun.

Tel Aviv offers varied and vibrant nightlife combined with exotic markets, gorgeous golden beaches, restaurants, museums, theatres and concerts. The ancient port city of Jaffa, with its medieval appearance, cobbled stones and artist galleries, provides a relaxing contrast to the modern pulse of Tel Aviv.

The Old Tel Aviv Port has become the city's premier entertainment center, with dance clubs, cafes and restaurants at the water's edge and great shops featuring the work of Israeli designers.

The port attracts to its wide wooden promenade people seeking to combine food, shopping and entertainment with romantic red sunsets, salty sea breezes and white sails on the horizon.

EXHIBITION

An exhibition will take place during the Conference for commercial exhibitors, publishers and organizations. For further information regarding exhibition options, please contact the Secretariat.

PAYMENT

Payment for registration fees must be paid directly to the Secretariat and can be made by check, bank transfer*, or credit card. Kindly refer to the registration form for details. Please ensure that registration forms are submitted together with payment (one per participant) and that details stated are clear and legible.

* Please ensure that the name/s of the participant/s and Conference are clearly stated on the bank transfer.
